

I feel that the deadly effect of communications towers on migratory birds is a serious issue. These birds are dieing at an alarming rate because so many of these towers have been built with little regard to the fatal consequences regarding the birds. The FCC, and the companies who own and build these towers, are responsible for their safe operation ... including migratory birds!

I urge the FCC to undertake research and investigations pertaining to the impact that these communication towers are having on birds. Upon completion of the findings I would expect appropriate action to be take to prevent further bird deaths both now and in the future.

Thank you for your time and attention.

Sincerely,

Rob Gonzalez
